Mina Hristemova

A review of the Bulgarian and the available Greek periodicals from the epoch of the Renaissance is done in the expose and the place of Asenovgrad is searched through it. The articles of Bulgarian and Greek language are analyzed and an attempt is made through the information, which they offer, to reconstruct the condition of the settlement of the revised period. There is an accent on the church-enlightment struggles, because in them are concentrated the strive of the Bulgarians of the town for the national self-definition. The conclusion of the author is, that the Renaissance periodicals is an exceptional source, but the position of the "other one" should be known, the different view points should be paralleled, in order the surveyor to get closer as possible to the exact historic moment.
